

REMIND EXEMPLAR

Joshua and George

Here are screenshots of Ms. Law sending notifications to her grade 12 biology class. On the left, we see that she is able to remind students to return course selection sheets, despite forgetting to mention it in class. Before the tests starts, she informs us about the posted seating plan, to prevent wasting unnecessary time at the beginning of class. She also shares a video for those interested in learning more than what was taught in class.

In the middle, she advises students to make a copy of the cell structure/function table before handing it in, so that students can use it to study. She also tells students, just before class starts, that class will be in the library. This way, no one will forget! On the right, she gives students a happy surprise when she postpones the deadline for a lab.
